Quality Training

Encompass training facilitators are supported by our talented professional associates – experienced practitioners, with the expertise to deliver quality training in specific areas as required.

All Encompass workshops are highly interactive, allowing participants at any level of experience to build on their existing knowledge and skill. Our training caters for workers in both government and community services. In fact, we specialise in cross-sector sharing of knowledge.

Our Trainers

Chris-Maree Sultmann

B. Social Work (First Class Hons).

Chris is recognised as a truly exceptional training facilitator. Known for her expertise and fresh approach, Chris brings knowledge and wisdom from over 30 years work in child and family welfare in Queensland to every training gathering she facilitates. Chris has extensive experience in practice, policy, program and training development and research across the child protection, family support, foster care and care by kin, youth work and domestic and family violence sectors. Passionate about the development of frontline workers, their supervisors and leaders, Chris develops training that is research based, reflective and actively supports participants to integrate contemporary knowledge with their daily practice.

Kristy Carr

Bachelor of Social Work

Kristy is an outstanding training facilitator, passionate about creating positive and safe learning experiences for all participants. Kristy brings over 20 years experience in the human services sector to her training and facilitation, with a keen interest in trauma-informed practice from her direct work with children and young people with trauma-based behaviours. Kristy is adept at providing training approaches that support participants to apply theory to frontline and leadership roles. Using reflective, interactive and creative processes, participants who work with Kristy are encouraged to consider new knowledge and skills to develop their practice.

“A great presenter. Very engaging and passionate about teaching skills that can help people”

Training workshop schedule 2023

One day face-to-face 02/02/2023

First-Up – client response training for administration staff

Administration workers are often the first persons with whom a client or potential client of your agency will have contact. When that initial contact is by an upset, highly anxious or angry client, it is not easy to find the right response. This workshop equips and supports administration workers in their role of providing 'first-up' responses to clients and members of the public who present in person at reception or over the phone. We consider how to interact calmly and safely with people who are presenting in a state of crisis or affected by alcohol or drugs, including how to convey empathy while encouraging the client to contain their anger or upset or behaviour. A workshop for all admin workers who may be 'first-up' in responding helpfully in difficult situations or helping to de-escalate potential crises.

Who should attend? Administration workers in human service agencies who have direct 'front counter' or telephone contact with clients and members of the public.

“ lots of training can have too much content and be boring - but this was all useful and engaging. ”

“ Good examples, easy to understand. Good presenter. Good humour. I really enjoyed the workshop – it will help me with strategies to deal with difficult situations I encounter in my job. So informative!! ”

Online 2 x 3 hr 14/06/2023 and 15/06/2023

For The Record – effective recording for child and youth work

Recording – from case notes to formal reports – is essential to effective child and youth work but can be difficult to do well. This highly interactive workshop examines the art of recording in various contexts. Learn how to write well-structured notes and reports which achieve their purpose as tools to help protect and support children and young people. Participants will learn to apply the 'rules' for succinct but effective recording, producing efficient and useful documents to support good practice.

Who should attend? Government and community agency workers, family support workers, youth workers, foster and kinship care support, intervention service workers.

“ This training will help me make better judgement calls when it comes to the client. I would highly recommend this training! ”

Online 2 x 3 hr 09/08/2023 and 10/08/2023

Making the Invisible... Visible – shining a light on child sexual abuse in family-based care

If you work in statutory child protection or with children and young people living away from home, this is a workshop that you cannot afford to miss! The Royal Commission into the Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse was a significant process that led to the unearthing of key learnings about how to protect children from sexual abuse in institutions. The Commission established that the risk of sexual abuse for children and young people living away from home can be only too real. To protect children in care from sexual abuse practitioners need to be knowledgeable about the dynamics of sexual offending as well as being able to assess the risks of sexual abuse across 4 key dimensions; and then implement safety strategies across the 4 domains of safety. The safety of children in family-based care is the responsibility of all professionals involved in a child's life. Practitioners need to know what they are looking for and must have an openness to seeing it.

In this workshop you will learn about the dynamics of child sexual offending, the 3 typologies of offenders, the process of child grooming and the 4 dimensions of risk and safety for child sexual abuse when children live away from home. Practitioners will walk away from this day feeling empowered about how to strengthen the safety of children in family-based care.

Who should attend? Foster and Kinship Care Support Workers, out-of-home care workers, Specialist OOHC workers, Residential Youth Workers, Statutory Child Protection Workers, Team Leaders and any professional connected with family-based care.

“Great development of ideas and discussion of concepts. I really enjoyed it and found it a great way to think about my practice.”

“Very relevant and useful. Practical examples reinforced concepts being presented”

Online 2 x 3 hr 09/08/2023 and 10/08/2023

Family Ties – enabling kin to care for family

The research is in! Children living away from home need to be cared for by kin whenever possible. However there can be some challenges to negotiate. Family relationships and interactions, cultural matters and worries about capacity or intergenerational trauma can all impact here. This workshop uses contemporary research and thinking to spotlight how workers can be most effective in collaborating with families to enable and promote safe and responsive care by kin for children and young people. If we understand care by kin as 'family supporting family' then the question for workers is how to best support, resource and enable this?

Who should attend? Workers actively supporting care by kin from government and non-government services, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander agencies and non-Indigenous organisations.

“Great agenda. Presented really well. Great context.
I'll reflect on my learnings and reiterate in team meetings.”

“Great workshops by vibrant, effective presenters – a fantastic program all round.”

Delving Deeper - cultivating expertise in risk assessment

Is risk assessment still relevant in child protection when you work from a positive, optimistic and strengths framework with families? Of course! Assessing risk remains at the core of protecting children and young people. Yet what some find tricky is how to integrate risk assessment processes with a strengths-oriented practice approach or how to collaborate with families in identifying risk and working to build safety for children together. This workshop 'delves deeper' into this question, reviewing contemporary understandings of the concepts and skills critical to risk assessment and exploring how to successfully enable these in practice while engaging with families around the safety of their children. The complexities of this work are enormous, as is the responsibility to 'get it right'. This workshop provides the opportunity to explore your understanding and approach to risk assessment and where it fits with frameworks for inclusive engagement and work with families.

Who should attend? Frontline child safety workers, team leaders and managers, in statutory and community services. Child Safety, Family and Child Connect, Intensive Family Support services and any personnel across government and community sectors who have responsibility for risk assessment in the context of working to support families.

“ I have a much clearer understanding of risk assessment. Interactive and well-structured. Will really help me support my team to be more clear, thorough and collaborative in risk assessment. ”

Who should attend? Administration workers in human service agencies who have direct 'front counter' or telephone contact with clients and members of the public.

“ It was a refresh on information and skills that I learnt some time ago. It has re-energised the way I do things in a positive way. It will make a difference by making me more prepared and confident in all aspects of client-centred communication. ”

Online 2 x 3 hr 04/10/2023 and 05/10/2023

Eyes Wide Open – assessing risk in foster and kinship care

There are no risk-free options in protecting children. Foster and kinship care can bring huge benefits and also some risk. This workshop offers foster and kinship care support workers the opportunity to clarify and develop their practice approach to ensure that they are tuned in to the structural risks of family-based care, as well as individual risk profiles for children and carers themselves. This workshop aims to promote purposeful and effective support work with carers that achieves safety, stability and continuity for children and young people.

Who should attend? Foster and Kinship Care Support workers in government and community agencies.

“Excellent workshop! Practical and informative workshop.
Will be able to use this directly in my practice.”

Online 2 x 3 hr 01/09/2023 and 02/09/2023

Repairing Broken Threads – reconnection and reunification practice

Work to reconnect or reunify children, young people and their families is complex, sensitive, challenging and rewarding. It must be done well. We know that most children and young people living away from their families will return home – at some point, in some way. Even for those who cannot ‘go home’, research suggests there are benefits in family connection. The craft of this work lies in how to determine the optimal level and nature of this connection for individual children and young people. If you are interested in exploring this area of practice with a view to clarifying and consolidating your understanding, skills and approach, this is the workshop for you. Contemporary thinking and research inform activities designed to develop your knowledge and skills in: assessing safety; planning effective support and intervention; and collaborative work with children, young people, their families and carers in this emotive and critical work.

Who should attend? Government and non-government alternative care and reunification workers, residential care workers, foster and kinship care support workers

“Delivery of content excellent and easy to stay focused.
Engaging presenter with a lot of knowledge.”

A Cook's Tour of Change

Interested in knowing more about how to support the people you work with in achieving and sustaining change over time? This is the workshop for you! Our brand-new workshop gives you a "Cook's Tour" of contemporary change theory – a rapid review of current research and thinking on change, informed by change theorists and the neuroscience of change. Participate in activities that explore how to utilise this knowledge with the people you support in your practice and in your workplace. Together we will focus on these core questions:

- What can change theory tell me about how to understand change?
- What is my job as a 'change agent' and how can I actively apply change theory in my practice?
- What is effective in achieving and sustaining the change that people want in their lives?

Who should attend? Any practitioner or leader working, supporting and/or coaching children or young people, individuals or families in achieving change.

“ Meeting others and networking was great! All the information is so relevant. Resources excellent. Loved going indepth to look at theory in practice. Easy to understand information about trauma and pain-based behaviour. Useful and helpful strategies for practice! ”

Online 2 x 3 hr 29/11/2023 and 30/11/2023

Holding the space – effective supervision for supervisors

Supervisors in the area of child, youth and family welfare commonly learn how to supervise solely through 'on the job' experience. Their main source of knowledge may be their own experiences of being supervised. This interactive one-day workshop helps supervisors in child and family welfare and youth services to understand supervision as a specific area of practice and to develop their practice skills in this area. Participants consider contemporary thinking and knowledge around supervision frameworks and models and are supported to use this in developing their supervision practice approach.

Who should attend? Government and community agency workers currently supervising staff, new supervisors and workers interested in taking on a supervisory role.

“ Love the delivery methods.
Love the fun activities, colour pens, play dough and lollies.
Great engaging activities. ”

Bridging Troubled Waters – resolving workplace issues and difficult team dynamics

Positive team dynamics underpin effective workgroups and when all is well, we may take this harmony for granted. But when conflict or personality clashes persist, everyone is affected and productivity can plummet. This workshop considers the tricky issues in managing workplace conflict and tension and restoring harmony. How do you engage workers who do not respond to the usual supervisory efforts to address unacceptable behaviour? How do you use your own personality and negotiation skills to ensure fair dealing while getting to the source of trouble? What strategies and techniques might help? This workshop is for competent supervisors who need a few more 'tricks up their sleeve' for resolving workgroup issues and for those who want to avoid such issues arising.

Who should attend? Team leaders, supervisors and managers responsible for workgroups in both government and community agencies.

“ Everything about these workshops was of great interest and I am looking forward to taking it all back to my work colleagues. ”

Building Bridges – child protection practice for educators

This workshop is specifically designed for teachers and school personnel. The concept of 'building bridges' acknowledges the roles of educators as conduits between home and school in promoting student wellbeing. This workshop covers legislative requirements for identifying and responding to harm to students, along with core concepts of effective child protection practice. Case scenarios guide participants to consider child protection risk and protective factors, to determine risk of significant harm and to decide the most appropriate course of action. We consider contemporary research about how best to support families within the school community to help prevent child protection crises.

Who should attend? Teachers, principals, school counsellors, school nurses and designated student protection officers.

On request

Building the Picture for Educators – identifying and responding to harm and sexual behaviour

This workshop equips educators with knowledge and skills to meet mandatory training requirements for identifying and responding to harm. It considers concepts of abuse/neglect and likely harm to children, within the context of legal requirements and duty of care. It explores children's sexual development and distinguishes between more usual developmental behaviours and those considered problematic, providing a framework that guides educators in responding to all types of sexual behaviour. There is opportunity for participants to discuss behaviour and concerns encountered in work settings so that they leave the workshop with more confidence and potential solutions.

Who should attend? Child care educators, child care directors, family day care educators, outside school hours (OSHC) educators and directors.

“ It was great having a facilitator who held my interest all day with excellent skills and knowledge about what was presented. ”

On request

DNA – development 'N' attachment for child protection work

Together, child development and attachment theory form a critical cornerstone underpinning practice across child protection, family support and youthwork. Yet many workers say they have only a hazy understanding of critical theoretical concepts and little real idea of how to use these in their practice. This one day workshop draws on contemporary developments in research and theory to provide a practical working knowledge of child development and attachment for frontline child protection workers. Participants explore the implications of theoretical concepts for assessment and intervention and consider how to integrate theory with daily practice in their specific role.

Who should attend? Front-line workers, their team leaders and senior practitioners across the child protection, family support and youth sectors.

“ Very clear, easy to understand, practical, will be able to implement in work place. ”

On request

Playing It Safe – child safety risk management for educators

Every school and childcare service has a duty of care and legal obligations around ensuring the safety of children and young people from abuse. The educators and others involved will be aware of the child protection policy – but is this enough? We know that sexual, physical and emotional abuse of children and young people can occur in school and childcare settings. Educators also have the responsibility of being alert to the needs of children and young people who may be at risk at home. This short workshop goes beyond the basics and assists your key people – teachers, group leaders, in-home educators – to not only recognise child protection issues, but also to respond appropriately to the children and young people relying upon their vigilance.

Who should attend? This workshop is aimed at schools and childcare services, of all types and across the P-12 spectrum. Contact us to arrange a suitable time for us to come to you, including evenings.

“ I feel extremely motivated and informed - the entire content will be used - thank you. ”

On request

Leading Self and Others – being an effective leader in the human services sector

This workshop is tailored to the needs of your leadership team by drawing upon contemporary research and thinking about how to maximise individual leadership skills to meet the multi faceted challenges within the human services context. Being a ‘realistic’ leader is key and starts with understanding what you bring to your leadership role and how self awareness and knowledge is the springboard for developing your skills further.

Fine tuning your individual leadership skills is only part of the story - how you use these skills across all aspects of your work with clients, your team and other organisational leaders is also a key focus of this workshop.

Reflective Practice

Keen to promote practice excellence in your workgroup, program or organisation? Interested in an innovative and enjoyable way of developing the practice knowledge and skills of your staff and colleagues? The evidence is in – reflective practice is the strategy of choice. We know that human services workers who are encouraged to ‘reflect-on-action’; ‘reflect-for-action’; and ‘reflect-within-themselves’ are much better equipped to ‘reflect-IN-action’ with individuals and families. Encompass consultants are experts in facilitating reflective practice programs that bring demonstrable benefits for practitioners, families and organisations. Our engaging and interactive approach to this work encourages curious and thoughtful practice by workers and enables a ‘community-of-practice’ culture. Encompass has provided these services for many years and we are thrilled to see organisations coming back to us year after year when setting up new programs or seeking to rejuvenate the practice of established teams. We offer one-off sessions, a series of 3 – 6 sessions or a longer-term program of regular sessions to help sustain progress over time. Contact Encompass today at enquiries@efac.com.au to find out more about what we can do for you in reflective practice.

Leadership Development

Looking to extend your leadership knowledge and skills or those of your leadership team? Wanting to promote and develop leadership talent and practice within your organisation? The experience and knowledge of the Encompass team will hit the mark for you. In a sector where it is common for leaders and managers to be ‘promoted practitioners’ Encompass has long known the value brought by understanding leadership as its own area of practice. We offer a practical and evidence-informed range of development and coaching services to benefit individual leaders within your organisation or to grow the identity, knowledge and skills of the whole of your leadership team. We take the time to listen to exactly what it is your leaders need so we can then construct a bespoke approach that will bring the results you are after. Contact us on enquiries@efac.com.au to speak with one of our leadership experts today!
